TWENTY ONE LIVES LOST IN STORMS

SIXTEEN KILLED IN TORNADO THAT HITS ALABAMA VILLAGES

Additional Bodies Are Sought—Relief Work
Is Launched

Troy, Ala., Oct. 26.—Relief work was under way today among tornado victims of Pike and Barbour Counties, struck Sunday by a storm that killed sixteen persons, injured a score and did thousands of dollars damage.

Five thousand dollars was raised to care for the homeless.

Rescue parties were organized for additional bodies. First reports were that at least twenty were killed but only sixteen bodies have been found, nine of which were white.

The storm came out of the west and sweeping down with tremendous force, roared through Pike County, leveling homes and killing thirteen persons and then swept over to Barbour County, where three were killed.

The tornado area was a scene of wreckage and desolation today. Homes and barns were down and dead animals lay amidst household goods strewn on the highways. Trees were laid low and farm crops completely ruined.

In Goodhope, Pike County, four members of the family of Ralph Knight, were killed.

The cries of the injured and dying arose above the roar of the storm. There was a heavy downpour of rain with vivid flashes of lightning. Residents who escaped, worked for hours picking up the injured and taking them to hospitals here.

DEMOCRATS LAUNCH CAMPAIGN AGAINST TAXING AMENDMENTS

Last Legislature Was Treacherous State Committee Says

Columbus, Oct. 26.—The long expected partisan fight over the proposed classification, four year terms and taxation amendments to be voted in referendum at the November 3 election, broke out in all its fury today.

In a statement denouncing the last legislature as "treacherous and given to resorting to trickery," the Democratic state central committee, approved Gov. Donahoe's condemnation of the amendments.

In counter statement, Fred W. Warner, chairman of the Republican state Central Committee, accused the governor of "grand-standing" and charged the executive with maintaining "passive silence" when the amendments were before the legislature.

"You cannot make men honest with a dishonest law and a law that favors one class and discriminates against another," a statement issued by Chairman T. E. Dye, of the Democratic organization declared. "The purpose of the tax amendment is legalized evasion which means when properly analyzed 'dishonesty.'"

ARMIES MUST EVACUATE SAYS LEAGUE

GREEKS AND BULGARS MAY HALT FIGHTING; FIVE PERSONS KILLED

Cold, Rain, Epidemics Spreads Terror Among Refugees.

Paris, Oct. 26.—League of Nations Council meeting here today has given the Greeks and Bulgarians twenty four hours in which to instruct their troops to withdraw from the occupied territory along the Macedonia frontier.

The council demanded definite proof of the evacuation by Thursday.

An investigation committee was formed to study the situation in order to cancel all responsibility for the conflict which threatened the Balkans with a new war.

Military attaches of the powers constitute the commission.

On reaching the decision of the council, British Foreign Secretary Austen Chamberlain insisted that there be no firing during the evacuation.

If there should be such, it would be deemed an affront to the League of Nations to which both Greece and Bulgaria belong.

Minister Maroff for Bulgaria and Minister Carapatos for Greece accepted the council's decision.

London, Oct. 26.—The Athens correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph reported today that at the instigation of Roumania, the "agreed" to withdraw their forces agree" to withdraw their forces behind their respective frontiers.

Sofia, Oct. 26.—Five persons were killed and ten wounded—principally non-combatants, over the week end as Greek artillery fire continued against the Bulgars near the edge of Macedonia.

Without heeding the exhortations of President Briand of the League of Nations Council, the Greeks Sunday kept up their artillery fire, and intensified it as night came on.

Cold, and the fear of an epidemic spread terror among the refugees fleeing from the occupied territory as the league of nations council prepared to meet in Paris to deal with the Greco-Bulgarian conflict.

Authorities sent medical aid and blankets in the hope of forestalling the epidemic but there was misery because of the government's inability to provide even scanty shelter for the peasant folk.

Men women and children were reported huddled together beneath trees, hoping thus to escape some of the blast of cold rain.

London, Oct. 26.—A Sveti-Vrach dispatch to the Evening News declared the Greeks have killed a total of twenty-one persons and wounded nine others.

Of this number some were women and children.

The paper related that fire added to the destruction.

The Sunday action was directed against Petrich (Petritsi), Piberita, Patrovo, Lehovo and Maricostinovo.

Sofia, Oct. 26.—Greek offensive against Bulgaria went on unabated today.

While diplomats of the League of Nations council were gathering at Paris to decide the border conflict, the Greeks early today widened their offensive to the west of the river Struma.

GAS BUGGIES—Hem's Principles Are Higher Than He Realized.

INDIVIDUALS HAVE CHANCE TO SCORE IN MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION CONTEST NOW

Remember the story about the hare and the tortoise?

This is a good fable for the contestants in the Detroit Street Merchants' Association contest to keep in mind, members of the organization bring out.

They lay stress on the fact that individual contestants in the race for possession of the Willys-Knight coupe-sedan and the nine other attractive prizes offered in the contest should not let the permission of the pool of votes by organizations discourage them in saving up for the prizes.

By persistent vote-collecting individuals have a big chance to be in the lead in the contest, merchants say. Just keep plugging, folks, and just because the organization, like Mr. Hare, seems to have all the advantage, he might go to sleep you know and the constant individual collector can come in with flying colors.

Although the Willys-Knight coupe sedan would be a mighty fine thing to receive as a Christmas present, December 24, when the contest closes, any of the other prizes offered in the contest are worthy of the greatest effort. Nine handsome cash prizes are being offered by the association besides the automobile and the individual contestant has a good chance to win one of these.

With the approach of Christmas and the stimulation to buying, votes are being collected in large numbers by entrants in the contest. Many individual workers have their friends and relatives working in their interest and the votes are rapidly piling up.

As a stimulus to buying, members of the Detroit Street Merchants' Association have inaugurated the "Wednesday Bargain Day" since the start of the contest and the attractive of offers have resulted in increased sales.

In order that customers could benefit by more individual attention and to distribute the crowds from the last

VALUE OF A NAME.

WHAT'S IN A NAME? The answer for generations back has been "nothing." True a rose by any other name would smell as sweet but try to sell it under a different name if you would better estimate the value of a name.

The name of Alexander, Hannibal, Caesar and Napoleons evacuated wall cities, turned whole armies into disastrous retreat, and conquered empires. Those names obtained their magic from the deeds of their owners.

Because his name might have been Smith would not have prevented Shakespeare from writing his classic tragedies and in spite of their common names George Washington and Abraham Lincoln won immortal fame. Genius is as accidental as its name.

And yet American manufacturers spend millions annually on names. For the purpose of establishing a trade name business enterprises conduct nation-wide and even world-wide advertising campaigns. To many manufacturers the name of their product is their fortune, a fortune which could not be amassed without the aid of advertising.

Modern business has learned that the three essentials for success in merchandising are a worthy product, a trademark and an adequate advertising campaign. Advertising is as essential to retail business as to the manufacturer.

THE AMERICAN YOUNG MAN.

SECRETARY WILBUR of the navy recently remarked that he was proud of the fine appearance made by the men of this service at the time of the trip of the fleet to Australia. He said that glowing reports were received of the good conduct of the sailors and marines.

Similar remarks have been made many times in regard to the conduct of navy men when they appeared in foreign ports. The men of the United States army on the whole made a very favorable impression in Europe during the war. Of course that force was so great and so hastily assembled, that there was no time for careful training in what might be called the conduct expected of a gentleman. That force had very big tasks on hand, and some matters of conduct had to be considered secondary.

The favorable impressions referred to above, demonstrate the possibilities of American young manhood. They raise the question whether such inspiring influences could not be brought to bear on all young men, that most of them at least would feel all the time the desirability of showing in their home environments the self restraint and high standards which may be developed when young men are given special training.

Every young man ought to be taught to feel a certain pride in his position as an American. He should be shown that this calls on him for a certain fineness and dignity, so that he will hate to lower himself by those actions that are not worthy of the position that is his.

Here is a line of thought that might be recommended to teachers and ministers and those having special contacts with young men. There are millions of them who take naturally to such standards without urging. The time will no doubt come when most American young men will acquire this feeling of pride in their citizenship that will keep them from doing unworthy things.

THE PIE SEASON.

STRICTLY speaking there is no pie season in the United States. The true American demands pie at all times in the year. But the funds of the land are so abundant through the autumn that it is a specially favorable time for the manufacture of pie.

But the art of pie making is not maintained according to the old standards. In many places they hand you out a concoction with an underdone and doughy lower crust. Such a product is only an aggravation, to one who was brought up in a home where the women folks made real pie. One is filled with melancholy reflection on the decline of past glories, as one consumes a pie of that debased nature, wondering whether it is better to try to finish it, or to leave it on the plate in distaste.

The modern young woman should learn this art. Good pie tends to produce happy homes, and must help reduce the divorce rate.

Just Folks

BY EDWARD A. GUEST

SOME TIME

From Betty Eaton comes a note. Which I should dearly love to quote, But space forbids, and so I'll take A thought or two from it and make For her this little round of rhyme About that far away "sometime!"

"Sometime," all parents love to say, We'll take you down to see a play, Sometime all pleasures you shall know.

Sometime to Boston we will go, Not now, but sometime later on An ocean boat we'll ride upon.

In days when I was but a child By "sometime" I was reconciled, I sat and dreamed and wished a lad Could share the joys which grownups had.

"Sometime you will," I heard them say, But "sometime" seemed so far away.

Now comes the little boy to me To say, "I've never crossed the sea," And I reply, "Upon a ship Sometime we'll take an ocean trip" And he, like you, this very day Thinks "sometime" is so far away.

But sometimes comes on flying wings And all the longing for joy it brings, The years rush by and soon you find The thrill of youth is left behind, It's just a little while, when you Like us, will promise "sometime," too.

RESTAURANT TO BE NAMED XENIA GRILL

The Xenia Grill will be the new name of the New Manhattan Restaurant, North Detroit Street, after it is completely remodeled by new owners soon.

Steaks will be a feature of the new eating place, it is said. Charles, John and James Malavazos obtain possession of the restaurant they purchased from John Mandenhol November 1.

The restaurant will be closed six weeks undergoing repairs, additions and improvements, which include installation of booths and a soda fountain and cigar counter. John and James Malavazos are owners of the Xenia Candy Kitchen, East Main St. and Charles is a cousin of John Malavazos.

Plans to conduct a contest for selection of a name for the new eating place has been abandoned.

"LOOK WHAT I FOUND IN THE PROSPERITY HOT CAKES!"

Twenty Years Ago

Postmasters throughout Greene County and patrons of the rural routes numbering 100, assembled in Xenia for the purpose of discussing arrangements for a full county service.

The capital of Greene County from present indications seems to be destined for a general awakening as a result of action of the Ohio Fuel Supply Company in extending its gas line to Xenia.

Fred, son of John Hornick, of the Commercial Hotel, has been quite ill, suffering from pneumonia, but he is now getting better.

FORMER HOME BOARD MEMBER IS DEAD

Albert Kern, 78, prominent Dayton attorney and former veteran member of the board of trustees of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home in Xenia, died Saturday morning at Miami Valley Hospital, Dayton, after a brief illness.

Besides being the oldest member of the Dayton Bar Association, Mr. Kern was especially prominent for his interest in welfare of soldiers and their organizations, and aided in supporting and promoting many military institutions throughout the country.

NEW DISHES THIS WEEK

Batter for Fruit Fritters: Beat two unpeeled eggs and mix them with one-half cup of sweet cold milk. Combine this wet mixture with one cup of bread flour previously sifted with one-half teaspoon of baking powder and a pinch of salt. Use this batter with any kind of fruit (next Sun.'s menu will call for Banana Fritters, but you may substitute apples, oranges, etcetera, if desired) adding one cup of the dried fruit to this amount of batter and frying as follows: Heat severa cups of fat to the smoking-hot stage in a small saucepan. It is no longer considered necessary to have the old-fashioned large deep fat kettle for frying foods. Take up a little of the batter-and-fruit mixture in a perforated aluminum spoon, and lower the spoon into the hot fat. When the fritter is brown on the under side, turn and cook so as to brown the other side. Drain it on crumpled iron paper while you fry another.

Tuna Fish Salad: Mix one can of tuna fish, flaked, with three boiled and diced white potatoes, one minced green pepper, two raw onions cut fine, and one stalk of celery diced. Moisten the mixture with one-half cup of Mayonnaise salad dressing and heap on crisp lettuce. Hard-boiled eggs may be added to this recipe if desired.

Lemon Sponge Pie Filling: Beat together one cup of granulated sugar, two egg-yolks, the grated rind and juice of one lemon and two teaspoons of softened butter. To this mixture add one cup of sweet, cold milk, stir vigorously, and fold in the two egg-whites stiffly beaten. Turn all into a pie pan already lined with uncooked pastry, and slip the pan into an oven which is fairly hot (just for five minutes, to set the crust). Now reduce the oven heat to medium so that the contents of the pie will not boil (an egg filling "wheys" when it boils) and continue cooking for 35 minutes.

Pot Roast of Beef: Sear the meat on all sides in drippings, then place it in a deep saucepan containing a few raw diced onions, carrots, and parsnips, and enough boiling water to rise one-third up the sides of the piece of beef. Cover the pot and let cook very slowly for two or three hours, until very tender.

Home-made Remedy Stops Cough Quickly

Finest cough medicine you ever used. Family supply easily made. Saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for an ordinary cough is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Four 25-cent bottles of Pinex in a pint bottle, then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for healing the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist to fill a pint bottle of Pinex with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Today's Talks.

THINGS THAT BELONG TO YOU

I recently read a sentence that ran like this: "The learned man's country is every country, and each town his town. Why, then, do men remain ignorant?"

Poverty is vastly more marked in those who lack appreciation than in those who have little in money and goods.

We live in a very rich world. The richest man is but a custodian for a brief period. Much that he boasts as his own, in reality belongs to many others. Every day on my way to work I pass a magnificent mansion owned by one of America's wealthiest men. But the owner is seldom there. Caretakers keep the grounds fresh and beautiful with flowers. I see these flowers oftener than he who ordered them planted.

For a few minutes each day I own that great estate!

For about twenty minutes each day I own Central Park in New York City, for I drive through and love its beauty twice a day when I am at home.

The ignorant are those who refuse to own. And I might add, who refuse to learn, as well.

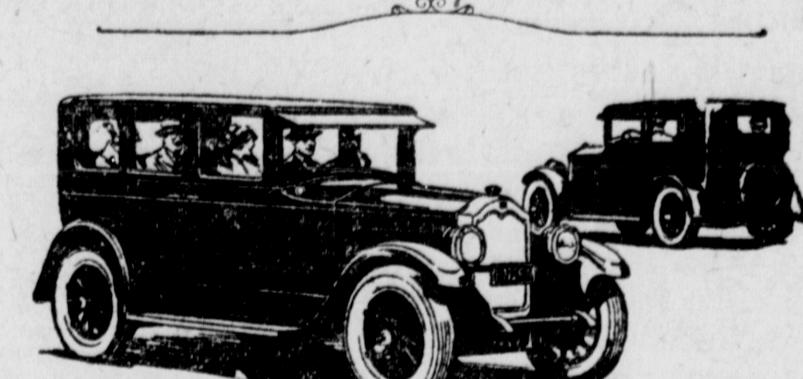

Every day I am amazed at the number of people who exist in a state of intellectual coma. They make me think of the rich lands that I have passed time and again that remain uncultivated.

A bank that has closed its doors is a sad sight. Yet there are human beings who close their minds to intellectual and spiritual life—and do not seem to care.

The bee goes to the flower and extracts sweetness. But it leaves the flower as bright and beautiful as ever. It is our business to grow, to find in our friends something sweet and strong and to extract it for our own benefit and then lay ourselves open for profit and gain in the same manner.

How thrilling to explore! What a world, this one of ours. Why do we not take more when so much has been left around expressly for us.

"Not Possible To Classify"

By Mack Sauer

A few jottings of the day by Samuel Pepys, Jr.: Mighty cold nights, I laying this night with covers a plenty but froze, nearly. Up and to my serenings where observed the painters already out working on my house, albeit it only seven of the clock.

By and by came a friend to borrow money of me, which I gave without taking a note; a foolish trick, I relying only on his honesty and knowing nothing about him except what I have seen with my own eyes. Talked with a race horse man about what a good sport it is to watch race horses, but I frightened of it.

About noon came a man to get my ear for his trophies, making known to me of how his wife has had tailings out with his mother, and did beat her and then left; and whom he hereafter must keep assunder, for his wife cares only for pleasure, and he will deny bills she might make, as justly he should. Yet I said nothing, taking sides with neither, the pray that all will get right and they again be friends.

Bethought myself to go in the evening to see the bowling games and fine fun it was too. Longed to go back to my little home town some time and see the old scenes and in special the place where I used to steal watermelons.

Talked with Johnny Kohl who goes to Florida soon and wished I could go with him, not knowing where the money will come from for coal.

CEDARVILLE COLLEGE GRIDIRON BATTLE STRONG DEFiance TEAM TO SCORELESS TIE

Cedarville and Defiance College football teams battled through four quarters to a scoreless tie in a drenching rain Saturday afternoon at Cedarville. Because of the slimy condition of the college gridiron the game was staged on the Cedarville High School field which was but a slight improvement.

Defiance was outplayed from start to finish and was continually on the defensive but by receiving the breaks of the game managed to keep its goal uncrossed. The play was almost entirely in Defiance territory and the visitors never threatened to score.

Cedarville had three good opportunities to score. Three attempted place kicks and drop kicks were blocked and once when the home eleven pushed the ball to the fifteen yard line, a fumble was made.

Outstanding players for Cedarville were Peters at end, Rockhold at guard and Currie, Holton and Adair in the backfield. Holton, Peters and Currie are former Central High School stars. Currie returned to the lineup for the first time this season since recovering from an ankle injury. He played three-quarters of the game but did not carry the ball. His punting was exceptionally good and his boots ranged from 40 to 70 yards despite the adverse conditions. One kick rolled for eighty-five yards.

Cedarville will meet Findlay College in its annual homecoming game at Cedarville Saturday afternoon. The game will begin at 2:30 o'clock. Findlay defeated Defiance 26 to 9 this season and should give Cedarville a battle. The game is the feature of the Cedarville schedule. Appropriate ceremonies in connection with the homecoming celebration will precede the contest.

TUESDAY OCTOBER - 27 CELEBRATED AS
NAVY DAY IN AMERICA

The American Navy is a hundred and fifty years old this year. Early in the struggle for their liberties the Colonies realized the need of Naval Vessels. On October 27, 1775, the Naval Committee of the Continental Congress, which had been appointed a fortnight previously, presented a resolution authorizing the purchase of merchant vessels to be converted into men-of-war. The Alfred was the first of these ships to be commissioned and John Paul Jones was her first Lieutenant.

The hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the Navy will be celebrated throughout the country on October 27, which has been observed as Navy Day for a number of years past.

There is a double reason for that day being set aside: to honor the Navy and to pay homage on his birthday to that great American, Theodore Roosevelt.

Both as Assistant Secretary of the Navy and later as President, Mr. Roosevelt stood firm for an efficient and well drilled Navy. Through his efforts attention was more closely directed to gunnery exercises and no one will gainsay the supremacy of the gunners of our Navy. Boldness was always a forte of this President and it was his bold order that caused our entire battle fleet to make a cruise around the world. The wisdom of this particular bit of audacity was proved by the marvelous results of that cruise.

From this brief resume it will be seen that the joint celebration of Navy Day and the birthday of Theodore Roosevelt is not a matter of coincidence but that it is a double tribute to that man of men and to the Navy that has so profited by his aid.

Our Secretary of the Navy in his recent letter to the President of the Navy League, wrote:

"The Navy is one of the great possessions of the American people. The Navy League can engage in no more worthy undertaking than to promote a fuller understanding of the widespread and valuable services performed by the navy.

The navy in an efficient state, provides security while withdrawing a minimum number of men from industry, and thousands of men trained in the navy are returned each year to civilian life better equipped to serve themselves and the community.

It is important that our people realize that the Navy is a national insurance against the very causes which have heretofore provoked war, that it is an agency of mercy to our that it is an agency of mercy to our own people and those of other countries, and of the many other activities in which the Navy is engaged.

I have the honor to inform you that the President has approved of the celebration of Navy Day, and I am happy to assure you of the utmost co-operation of the Navy in this patriotic work."

The president of the United States recently said, "the traditional devotion of the navy to the highest usefulness and efficiency makes it especially fitting that navy day be so observed as to show the country's appreciation of this splendid service."

RURAL TAXES CLIMB FASTER THAN URBAN REVEALED BY SURVEY

The city man's taxes have been climbing steadily upward these past forty years, but the farmer's taxes have been climbing faster.

A study of urban and rural taxes by rural economics department at the Ohio State University reveals this definitely. O. M. Johnson, until recently at the state university, compared city taxes per capita with the per capita taxes in 88 rural townships—one from each county in Ohio.

Back in 1880, he found, Ohio city taxes were $14.24 per capita; that is, if the total tax duplicates in the cities had been divided equally among all the inhabitants, each would have paid $14.24 in taxes. In rural Ohio in 1880, taxes were $6.10 per capita, or less than half of the city man's.

Last year, 1924, taxes in Ohio cities were $49.13 per capita, an increase of 245 per cent over 1880. Last year in the 88 rural townships taxes were $31.74 per capita, an increase of 420 per cent over 1880.

By 1900 city taxes per capita in Ohio had risen to $17.24, a 21 per cent increase over 1880; by 1910, to $18.03, an increase of 27 per cent; and by 1920, to $38.12, an increase of 168 per cent over 1880. Similarly, in rural Ohio taxes per capita stood at $7.68 in 1900, an increase of 26 per cent over 1880; 1910 at $12.15, an increase of 99 per cent; and by 1920 at $26.38, an increase of 332 per cent over 1880.

This relation between city and country taxes holds true, the economists point out, even though a dollar won't buy as much now as it did in 1880.

MRS. L. A. GAGE IS CALLED BY DEATH

Mrs. Anna Maud Gage, 75, wife of L. A. Gage, died at her home 335 West Third Street at 6:33 o'clock Saturday night after an illness extending over a period of several years. She had been seriously ill for the past two weeks. Death was due to complications.

Mrs. Gage was born in Warren County in August, 1870 and was married to L. A. Gage September 4, 1890. Her maiden name was Eurnhart. She had lived in Xenia for the past two years and formerly made her home west of the city. She was also an active member of the First Methodist Episcopal Church.

She is survived by her husband, one daughter, Mrs. Ruth Faulkner; one son, Vance, of Cleveland; one grand daughter, Dorothy Faulkner; two brothers, Berton Eurnhart and Clifford, of Springboro, and one sister, Mrs. Josiah Davis, of Waynesville.

Funeral services will be held at the home Tuesdays morning at 10 o'clock with interment in Spring Valley Cemetery.

BRINGING UP FATHER

SYNOPSIS

Mrs. John Mannerling and Diane Bledsoe are caught in a forest fire. The girl plunges into the river, from which she is drawn by the older woman. Mrs. Mannerling accomplishes the rescue at the peril of her own life, for a landslide has broken the dam and Mannerling with difficulty fights to save his wife from the unleashed flood. It is a desperate struggle, with every step become a pain, every movement agony.

CHAPTER XV—Continued

Headless of the flames which leaped beside him and of the overpowering heat, John reached the bank and dropped down upon the edge. Completely spent, his heaving chest cried for air where there was only smoke, his heated blood called for coolness where there was only fire. Struggling, choking, all was growing dark about him as consciousness faded. It was weak and quivering arms, without a pound of lifting power, that he extended down to her—useless arms.

And that ragged, surging mass of water was upon her—it towered above her!

In that awful moment, Eileen seemed to sense her husband's presence. Looking upwards, she gazed full into his glazed eyes. In that instant, the fear and sadness in her face melted before wonder, before joy and inexpressible happiness.

"John," she breathed, and again, "John."

Amidst the thunder of waters which tugged at her feet, her cry seemed to penetrate the twilight of his consciousness. Its sound was as a stimulant to his will, a tonic to his faid muscles. In a flash, his arms were steeled, the grip with which he seized her raised hands was as of iron. With the strength of a giant, he swung her up and back to safety even as that frightful wave tore at her ankles, at her knees, at her waist. Then, leaping back himself, he sank beside her, as balked of its prey, the wave swept on.

How long they lay there, John never knew. Suddenly cool, pure, life giving air was in his lungs. The draft caused by that mighty rush of water had revived them, and down there at the water's edge, they were protected from the awful heat of the burning forest. John sat up and took Eileen in his arms. They were safe.

A little distance away, along the shore, was Bledsoe, and Diane, like a tired child lay across his knees.

"She told me," he whispered in an agony of sorrow. "Diane is dead."

Then his bent figure straightened itself and in the seamed lines of his grief stricken face, there burned a rugged honesty which was almost heroic.

"She told me," he said. "Diane told me all before she died. The world must know the truth about your boy. She made me promise that."

Of how, when the forest fire had burned itself out, they made their way back to the road with Bledsoe bearing the body of his daughter as if it were a sleeping baby, John and Eileen remembered little. For that matter, the ride home seemed, after what they had undergone, like a dream. A restful, soothing dream, after a horrid nightmare.

He was well into the morning of the next day, election day, before Eileen began to feel herself again. Then, she moved slowly out on the terrace of her home and gazed forth at the sun lighted lawn with a great peace in her heart. In her hand was the newspaper she had been reading since breakfast and wonderfully interesting had she found it. In it was an account of the forest fire, of the destruction of Bledsoe's lodge and the village of Meadville; there too, was described the breaking of the dam and the great flood which had followed it. There also was the stirring story of John and Bledsoe's ride, of her husband's rescue of her and of Diane's death. Much space indeed was devoted by that journal to John Mannerling. There was exposed the trickery by which Jerome Wallace would have robbed him of the election. There was an item setting forth the action of the county authorities in refusing to accept John's resignation. There was another regarding the refusal of the County Central Committee to order his name removed from the ticket as their candidate for the office of District Attorney. And still another item there was. One of but a few lines and which Dryden would never have published had it not been for Bledsoe's grim insistence. That of Diane's confession.

A paper containing much and momentous news was it, and Eileen's eyes were still big with the wonder of these things, when a big car swung up the drive with a roar which awakened the echoes of the place. John Mannerling sat in the back and beside him was a slighter figure. Even as the machine slowed, that figure arose and vaulting from the car ran swiftly towards her. It was Bob.

With a cry of gladness, she gathered him in her arms. It was her boy—her baby—come home. Tears of joy leaped to her eyes to quickly dry as she pressed him again and again to her. Finally, she turned to her husband.

"What about the election, John?"

He gazed down into her eyes and smiled as she had not seen him smile in days.

"There can be but one result. The opposition has repudiated Wallace, withdrawn his name from the ticket. I have no opposition."

Now, as the three of them waited, there came from the direction of the brick wall a cheery oooh, at the sound of which Bob flushed and grew very uneasy.

And, with never a thought of waiting in maidenly reserve for her lover, no, not even content to meet him half way, Marjorie came dancing across the lawn in search of him.

Bob joined her at the foot of the steps and as they turned away, she raised her finger for his inspection and something glittered upon it.

"Look, Bob," her girlish voice was wafted back to John and Eileen. "It's our engagement ring—I bought it, myself."

John turned to his wife and that old wry smile was on his face.

"Heaven preserve us!" he said.

Eileen looked up with dancing eyes. Subconsciously, she must have caught something of the warm recommendation which Reddy had given the inn keeper for now, she paraphrased it for Marjorie's benefit.

"She's the sort of girl, John, who knows exactly what she wants, and she doesn't care how she gets it, so long as she gets it."

"Well, then, good bye, Bob," said John, but there was never a bit of sorrow about him, as he drew his arm about his wife. And so they stood gazing out at the sun lighted lawn, that seemed in its brightness to reflect their own future.

As they did so, the self same bird which had sung upon the trellis before Eileen's window on the morning of Bob's birthday, flitted back to his former perch and caroled joyously. Caroled with marvelous sweetness, as if indeed he heralded the advent of another day. A day when truth would rule and justice reign. Yes, justice—tempered by love.

The End

FARMERS TRY OUT AS RESEARCH MEN

The days when wheat was wheat and corn was just corn have passed in Ohio. Not only the scientists at the state university and experiment station, but farmers themselves are now working on a new basis.

In proof of this, Wallace E. Hanger, crops field man at the Ohio State University, tells how 97 farmers in 14 Ohio counties have this year turned parts of their corn fields into experiment plots to convince themselves that mongrel varieties of grain won't do as well as the varieties scientifically developed and advocated by the experiment station and college.

These 97 farmers are running comparative field tests of standard corn varieties like Woodbury, Reed's Yellow Dent, Claridge and Leaming, along side the unnamed varieties grown in their neighborhood for generations. The rows of mongrel corn will be compared with the standard varieties as to yield, moisture content, and so on.

Four years ago these farmer-experiment stations in field corn varieties began in Madison County under the guidance of the university crops extension men and the Madison County agent, S. R. Heffron. The fact that they are now in 14 counties, says Mr. Hanger, indicates that farmers definitely realize that corn isn't just corn or wheat just wheat.

Its members, both flock owners and hatcherymen, pay fees for all service rendered by the college, and employ a full-time field manager in addition. The association this past year, in fees for accrediting and certifying flocks, was about $9,000. That is more than the annual budget for poultry extension work from the state university.

The men who do the accrediting are trained at the annual poultry judging school each summer at the university. They receive certificates on passing a final examination.

A "Mr. Spahr," Xenia, escaped un-hurt when the automobile he was driving was struck by a north-bound Springfield and Xenia Traction Company car, at the edge of the city Saturday noon. The automobile was driven upon the tracks and became wedged. The auto damage consisted of a broken wheel while the running board on the traction car was broken. John Ryan was motorman on the traction but could not avoid the accident.
